Reviewer A:

Dear authors and editor

The manuscript entitled "Trend of antibiotics susceptibility of Escherichia coli from clinical specimens before and during COVID-19 pandemic" try to discuss the effect of COVID-19 on dissemination of antimicrobial resistance. Congratulations. This is an interesting topic. But in order to determine the appeal of this issue, a standard manuscript must be provided. Therefore, there are several basic problems with this manuscript. I have written my suggestions in a word.doc and attached it to this message in Reviewer Files section.

Recommendation: Revisions Required

Reviewer B:

Dear author/authors

All the should be revised by native English. All the comments were highlighted and noted in attached file.

Recommendation: Revisions Required

---

Reviewer C:

Abstract (especially the technical and statistical details) should be shortened, only statistical significant results should be indicated.

Some sentences should be rewrite they may have error of plagiarism.

The aim of the experiments should be better justified.

Only results of the copy table are not anything new to say

Results are too long.

I think results should be re-done.

The results need to be explained in detail. May be you can divide this section into several subtopics and then discuss each subtopic separately.

There is no logical reason for their results.

Recommendation: Decline Submission

Dear Prof. Mohammad Mehdi Feizabadi

Chief of editor

Thank You for the opportunity to submit my manuscript. I apologize for taking sometimes to reply. I already make several changes in the title, abstract and article body and references according to the reviewer's comment. I make a different color: blue is for reviewer A, green is for reviewer B. The references I rewrite to follow IJM format. The manuscript is saved in word version 2003.

Sincerely Yours

EH Wardoyo
